About the program:

The University of Opole in cooperation with local companies and business organisations has created an innovative program that allows the undergraduates to link their academic growth with practical application of knowledge and skills in business settings. Students learn how to function in business contexts by developing their skills in analysis, planning, management, economics, or IT. They learn to use English in speech and writing at C1 level of CEFR for languages. Students undergo an internship (a total of 960 hours) in enterprises, companies, corporations or institutions of their choice.

Future career prospects:

Undergraduates of English Philology – practical profile can seek employment in small, medium, or large manufacturing companies, design and administrative entities, and private enterprises, corporations, business institutions, in planning, logistics, or production and enterprise project management divisions, especially where advanced command of general and business English is a standard job requirement.
